The pope said that the Holocaust should teach "new generations" that "only the difficult path of listening and dialogue, love and pardon" can lead to "fraternity and peace in truth."

He expressed his prayer that the Holocaust be a warning for everyone: "May the Shoah teach especially, as much the old generations as the new ones, that only the tiring path of listening and dialogue, of love and pardon, leads peoples, cultures and religions of the world to the desired encounter of fraternity and peace in the world. May violence never again humiliate the dignity of man!"

Tue	Esday 14 th February – St. Cyril (monk) [826-869] and St. Methodius (bishop) [815-885] (both Patrons of Europe) Brothers from Thessalonica in Greece. They preached the gospel in Moravia using their own translation of the Scriptures and the liturgy in the local language. Thes translations into Slavonic were in an alphabet, now called Cyrillic, which they devised. They are honoured as apostles of the Slavic peoples and in 1980 Pope John Paul II declared them Patrons of Europe.
Frid	lay 17 th February – St. Fintan (abbot) Born in Leinster, he received his religious formation in Terryglass, Co Tipperary under the abbot Colum and was deeply influenced by his penitential practices and the severity of the Rule. Fintan made his own foundation in Clonenagh, Co. Laois. H died in 603.
	Seven Founders of the Order of Servites (religious) In the early 13 th century seven young merchants of Florence decided to help one another live more perfect Christian live As the result of a vision they became known as the 'Servants of Mary' and followed the Rule of St. Augustine.
See	ing your life through the lens of the gospels – Mark 1:40-45:
1.	Jesus' compassion for people suffering was an outstanding characteristic of his ministry. We see the healing power of God at work through him. Recall times when the compassion of others has had a healing effect on you. Remember also when your compassion towards someone in trouble brought them hope, healing or strength.
2.	'If you choose, you can make me clean.' Our choice is a key factor in how we affect others. We cannot choo to have no impact on the people in our lives. Even a choice to do nothing has an effect. When have you bee particularly aware of the importance of your choice to be a positive influence on another?
3.	Lepers were forced to live away from others. The leper's cure meant that he was also readmitted to contact with the community. Perhaps you recall people who were once ostracised being brought back into family or community. Who was the Jesus person who helped this healing to take place?

0	estions people ask:
	I see dozens of Mass cards given at a funeral. Is a priest obliged to offer Mass for each card he signs? Wha happens if he has signed more cards than the number of Masses he can offer?
A.	Yes, a priest who accepts a Mass stipend is bound in justice to offer Mass for that intention or to transfer the offering to another priest. Here in Ireland many priests receive more offerings than they can personally cove but there are priests in many other places who do not receive offerings and they are delighted to receive the transfer of stipends. To be honest with you, I'm not too pleased with the system as every Mass is to the ben of the entire Christian community, especially to those present at the celebration. Fr. One Jest of u	Deep End – SSSSSSSssssshhhhhhhh: e of the features of the Gospel of Mark is the big SECRET, what scholars call the 'Messianic Secret'. Whenev us heals people in Mark, he tells them not to tell anyone. On the odd occasion when the disciples show a little inderstanding, he tells them not to say anything to anyone about his miracles. You would think that Jesus would thit is should from the reafferer power mind the atrue it would he for nearly to the and heap compthing like the of understanding, he tells them not to say anything to anyone about his miracles. You would think that Jesus would want it shouted from the rooftops, never mind the torture it would be for people to try and keep something like this quiet. But Jesus is not that kind of Messiah. He doesn't want the publicity, not yet. He doesn't want people to have the wrong idea about what his MISSION involves. It is not about the glory, it is not meant to be easy, it is not without the difficult paths, the cross! It is all about service.

We can think of the leper as all those people in society that we don't want near us... they are easily identified by this question: 'who do you not want living next door to you?' Jesus reaches out to the alienated and by doing so, in today's Gospel, he himself becomes alienated. Jane Mellett (janemellet@yahoo.com)

Welcome Change of Approach:

To describe the covering up of clerical abuse in the Church as equivalent to omertà – the code by which Mafia bosses enforce the secrecy of their own criminal actions – is to use language as strong as any employed by the Church's critics over the last 10 years. The fact that it comes from Mgr. Charles Scicluna, Promoter of Justice at the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith and the man with responsibility for dealing with the thousands of child-abuse cases reported to the Vatican, suggests that he and his colleagues have fully grasped the extent of the evil that infected the Church over this matter. Mafia bosses are, above all, interested in self-protection; they flee from justice. The failure of the Church in the past to ensure justice for the victims of child abuse has emerged as no less of a scandal than the abuse itself, made worse when it was the result of actions by persons in authority. It was a crime in canon law to show malicious or fraudulent negligence in the exercise of one's duty, Mgr. Scicluna said, indicating that bishops could be deposed from their sees for falling down in their duty in this respect.

He was speaking in Rome at the end of an international symposium, entitled "Towards Healing and Renewal", sponsored by the Pontifical Gregorian University and attended by more than 100 bishops and 30 religious superiors. One abuse survivor who spoke called for bishops to be stripped of their posts if they failed to protect children from predatory paedophile priests. There are still notorious cases of high-level Church officials who have never faced justice for their errors of neglect.

The holding of the symposium, and the seriousness with which people such as Cardinal William Levada, prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, treated it, suggests that this department of the Vatican at least has caught up with the expectations of clergy and laity worldwide. They have at times been exasperated by the apparent inability of the official Church to grasp the enormity of the crisis. There were glimpses, nevertheless, of problems still unresolved. For instance, an American priest psychologist who has dealt with clerical child abusers said the organisational structure of the Church was skewed in favour of offenders, who were more likely to be believed by their bishops than those complaining of abuse. But there may be an even deeper problem – the "invisibility of the victim" in a system that concentrates on the sin of the perpetrator, as if that were the more urgent issue.

It was emphasised in the course of the symposium that the needs of victims should be the Church's first priority. But that is hard to square with the experience of an abuse survivor who seeks compensation in the courts, and finds the Church's lawyers hiding behind every legal nicety. A fulsome and sincere apology, such as that issued by Archbishop Bernard Longley of Birmingham after a criminal case this week, is of far more use to a victim than a legal wrangle. Overall, however, the fact of this symposium and the frankness with which it was conducted – despite the unnecessary exclusion of the press from its proceedings – represents a big step forward. It is not just victims who need healing, but the Church itself. From the editors desk of The Tablet
